The New Jersey Historic Trust has awarded grant money to two Bergen County restoration projects -- continuing one plan and jump-starting another.

Felician College was awarded $750,000 to continue the restoration of the Iviswold Castle on its Rutherford campus.

This is the second grant the Catholic university has received for the project. The first was used to repair the outside of the more than 120-year-old structure.

This grant will be used to renovate the inside.

The castle will eventually be used as a student center, said Barbara Lynch, Felician's director of public relations.

The New York-New Jersey Trail Conference was awarded $50,000 for design services in the restoration of the Darlington Schoolhouse in Mahwah, Executive Director Ed Goodell said. The trail conference will use the renovated schoolhouse as its office.

The trust will administer the awards, totaling $11 million and benefiting 61 sites, on behalf of the Garden State Historic Trust Fund.
